CENTENARY OF THE FORDSON

Border Union Show

Friday 28th & Saturday 29th July 2017

2017 marks the Centenary of the launch of the Fordson Model F, the first reliable mass-produced tractor. Over the years, the model was developed, refined and enlarged, spawning a wide range of Fordson, Ford and later New Holland tractors.

In the darkest days of the First World War the shortage of manpower and horses led to real concern over how to produce enough food to feed the nation. In the USA Henry Ford applied the production line disciplines learnt in the manufacture of the famous Ford Model T car to create the tractor that later became known as the Fordson Model F.

Recognising the crisis across the Atlantic, Henry Ford sent all the early production of the new tractor – 5,000 Model Fs – to Britain to work on British farms a year before American farmers could buy Fordsons themselves.

The Fordson Model F (above) owned by Alistair Robertson, Edinburgh will lead the display and parade of a Century of Ford Tractors with one from each decade at the 2017 Show.
